

Anti-Sikh riot case - Judgement

Why in news?

\n\n

The Delhi high court has recently reversed the acquittal charges by the trial court on the 1984 anti-Sikh riot convict.

\n\n

What is the case?

\n\n

\n

- The case relates to killing of five Sikhs and burning down of a gurdwara in Raj Nagar area in south-west Delhi on 1 and 2 November 1984.  $\n$
- This has happened at the backdrop of a riot that broke out following the assassination of then Prime Minister Indira Gandhi on 31 October of that year.

\n

• Thousands of people were killed in the riots.

\n

- Six accused, including Sajjan Kumar, who was a member of Parliament at that time, were tried in 2010.
- Three years later, the lower court had convicted five of the accused but acquitted Kumar of all the charges.  $\n$
- The trial court had rejected the testimony of eye witnesses against him.  $\slashn$
- The case was appealed by the CBI, riots victims and the convicts challenging the trial court's order.  $\n$
- The Delhi High Court reversed the acquittal and sentenced Kumar to imprisonment for the remainder of his life.

• The court accused him of promoting enmity and for acts against communal harmony.

∖n

- It has also said that the riots were a "crime against humanity".  $\slashn$

\n\n

What are the concerns?

\n\n

\n

- The court says that the Delhi Police and its Riot Cell had failed to carry out a genuine investigation.
  - \n
- The police have failed to record any untoward incident in the station's daily register and has also avoided the examination of key witnesses.  $\n$
- Thus this case is an example not only of the slowness of judicial processes but also of derailed investigations.  $\n$
- The investigation made meaningful progress only after it has been transferred to CBI based on a recommendation by the Nanavati Commission.  $\n$

\n\n

What should be done?

\n\n

\n

• The Delhi high court has heard testimonies of fearless and truthful witnesses and has proceeded the case accordingly, reigniting the hope for substantial justice.

∖n

- The judgement reinforce the hope that political patronage, administrative complicity and plain muscle power cannot prevail over the truth all the time.  $\n$
- However, the court has flagged the need for a separate law for punishment for crimes against humanity and genocide, since they are rarely invoked in domestic crimes.

\n

- Thus, given the major communal flashpoints in recent history, the legislature should look at the need for it and implement accordingly.  $\n$
