- It came to be known as the "right arm of the civil and left arm of the military".
- Battalion force- In 1870, the elements of the force were merged into three Assam Military Police Battalions, named after the Lushai Hills, Lakhimpur, and the Naga Hills.
- Darang Battalion- It was raised just before the onset of World War I. Since it was difficult to mobilise reservists at short notice, and soldiers of the Gurkha Battalion were on leave in Nepal, the Assam Military Police were tasked to take their place.
- Name change - In 1917, the name of the force was changed to Assam Rifles, recognising their work during the Great War, in which they fought shoulder-to-shoulder with Rifle Regiments of the British Arm.
- World War II- After the Japanese advance in 1942, the Assam Rifles fought a number of independent actions behind enemy lines.

What are the issues with Assam Rifles?

- Administration - The perks and retirement benefits are far better than those enjoyed by the CAPFs under MHA.
- However, Army personnel retire early at age of 35 while the retirement age of CAPFs is 60 years.
- Non-functional financial upgradation (NFFU)- It is granted to CAPF to financially address the issue of stagnation in their careers due to lack of avenues for promotions.
- Army personnel get 'One Rank, One Pension' (OROP) which is not available to CAPFs.
- Ministry of Home Affairs stand- It argued that all the border-guarding forces are under its operational control and wishes to take full control over Assam Rifles.
- AR continues to function on lines that were decided back in the 1960s, and the Ministry would want the Indo-Myanmar border to be guarded by personnel who work on the pattern of other CAPFs.
- Ministry of Defence stand- The sharing of responsibilities between the two forces frees up the armed forces to focus on their core strengths.
- Indian Army argued that AR is always a military force and not a police force and wishes to take full control over Assam Rifles.
- It has argued that giving control over the force to the MHA, or merging it with any other CAPF will send confusing signals and will affect national security.
