

Boosting Exports to India's Advantage

What is the issue?

\n\n

\n

- The midterm review of foreign trade policy 2015-20 has offered measures to boost exports.

\n

- However, India further needs structural changes for a higher and sustainable exports growth particularly in labour-intensive sectors.

\n

\n\n

What is the need?

\n\n

\n

- Significance - Exports are an important driver of economic growth and help create much needed jobs for India's growing workforce.

\n

- They played an important role in transforming countries such as South Korea and China in recent decades.

\n

- Therefore, India will need to work on increasing competitiveness to expand its exports share in the world market.

\n

- Opportunity - Due to rising wages and an ageing population, the long dominated labour-intensive manufacturing is moving out of China.

\n

- This should logically be an opportunity for India to expand its manufacturing sector.

\n

- However, this is not happening in a big way, and India is losing out to other Asian countries.

\n

- E.g. Vietnam and Bangladesh are becoming more competitive and are capturing the low-end manufacturing space being vacated by China.
\n
- On the other hand, India's competitiveness, in some of the labour-intensive sectors, has actually declined over the past decade.
\n

\n\n

What should India do?

\n\n

- Efforts to increase competitiveness and focussing on the potential labour-intensive sectors will certainly give India an edge to fill the vacuum.
\n
- Logistics - Improving logistics to increase efficiency, both in terms of the time and costs involved is of utmost importance.
\n
- The measures in this regard as spelt out in the trade policy review should be taken forward and put into action.
\n
- Labour Laws - India has a large number of small enterprises.
\n
- However, they are not in a position to attain economies of scale and compete in international markets.
\n
- The prime reason for this is the regressive labour laws.
\n
- Firms in labour-intensive sectors will need more freedom to operate.
\n
- Also, more flexibility in land acquisition will also help the manufacturing sector.
\n
- Trade Policy - India has always supported rule-based multilateral trade negotiations under the WTO.
\n
- But, as progress has been limited in recent years, it should also look for opportunities to reduce trade barriers at the regional and bilateral levels.
\n
- Also, there is the threat of protectionism and rising automation among the world nations.
\n
- Given this, India needs to be prepared to protect its interests without compromising on its open trade policy.

\n

- Currency - Rupee appreciation in the recent period is getting to be disadvantageous for the exports sector.

\n

- Given this, it is crucial that India keeps the currency competitive and stable.

\n

- This is not to suggest that India needs an undervalued currency, but RBI should not allow the rupee to appreciate sharply.

\n

- India should thus work on these fronts to capitalise on the changes in the global trade scenario.
