Bridging India and EU

Why in news?

\n\n

The upcoming visit to New Delhi of the EU's High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy, Federica Mogherini, will likely witness a frank Indo-European dialogue on the changing global and regional security environments.

\n\n

What are the areas of divergence?

\n\n

\n

- Stalled negotiations over the Free Trade Agreement.
- Mutual recriminations on combating climate change, and
- Divergent positions on Russia's role during the Crimean crisis. As a result, the strategic partnership has been far from "strategic".

\n

\n\n

What should be the area of focus?

\n\n

\n

- Prime Minister Modi's visit to Brussels and the resumption of the EU-India summit in 2016 marked a turning point.
- The summit saw a much stronger focus on security cooperation and the adoption of a joint declaration on counterterrorism.
- So, pivoting around "principled pragmatism", the EU's new Global Strategy (2010) underlines the "direct connection between European prosperity and Asian security”.

\n

- In their meetings, Ms. Mogherini and Foreign Minister Sushma Swaraj and National Security Adviser Ajit Doval should focus on converging foreign policy priorities into coordinated or common practices.
- Foremost is dealing with challenges in their shared extended neighbourhood, which stretches from Istanbul to Islamabad and from Moscow to Mauritius.
- This Eurasian arc of instability is of critical importance to Brussels and New Delhi’s aspirations to stabilise their regional peripheries.
- Afghanistan would be the logical starting point. Political coordination through an EU-India-Afghanistan trilateral, with regular security consultations to exchange assessments, could be the first step in this direction.
- The Indian Ocean region offers another potential area for cooperation.

\n

\n\n

What about China?

\n\n

\n

- With uncertainty surrounding American commitments and the formidable rise of China, the EU and India will also have to stop ignoring the dragon in the room.
- Delhi is keen to counter China’s European offensive, including €50 billion worth of investments since 2000, a dialogue with the EU on the Belt and Road initiative, and the ‘16+1’ mechanism (a platform created in April 2012 by China and 16 Central and Eastern European (CEE) countries).
- As Europe realises the costs of dependence on China, the EU must have a serious dialogue with India and other partners on how to pursue Eurasian connectivity plans that are truly multilateral and sustainable.

\n

\n\n

What is the way ahead?

\n\n

\n

- Finally, the EU and India also have similar stakes in stronger international institutions and a liberal order that protects global commons cooperatively.

\n

- If they agree to expand consultations on issues such as climate, trade and space, it is likely that Delhi and EU will find themselves agreeing far more times than usually expected.
