

Criminal Laws (Rajasthan Amendment) Bill, 2018

Why in news?

\n\n

Rajasthan recently passed a Bill providing for death penalty to those convicted of raping girls of 12 years and below.

\n\n

What is the Bill about?

\n\n

\n

- The Bill seeks to amend the Indian Penal Code with the insertion of new provision.

\n

- The Bill had inserted two new sections, 376-AA and 376-DD, in the IPC.

\n

- Section 376-AA provides for capital punishment or rigorous imprisonment ranging between 14 years and lifelong incarceration.

\n

- Section 376-DD makes a similar provision for gang-rape of a girl child.

\n

- It lays down death penalty or imprisonment from 20 years to lifelong incarceration for those convicted of the offence.

\n

- Each of the persons constituting the gang will be deemed to be guilty of the offence.

\n

- The Bill will become a law after it gets the Presidential assent.

\n

- Rajasthan became the second State, after Madhya Pradesh, to pass such a Bill.

\n

\n\n

What is the need?

\n\n

\n

- Offences relating to child rape and child gang-rape are taking place every now and then.

\n

- National Crime Records Bureau's 2016 report highlights a steady increase of cases of crimes against children in Rajasthan.

\n

- The State recorded around 4,000 such cases in 2016, which was 3.8% of the crimes against children registered across the country.

\n

- The legislation is said to aim at protecting the girl child by laying down a deterrent punishment, including death sentence, to the offenders.

\n

\n\n

What are the drawbacks?

\n\n

\n

- How far will institutionalising capital punishment really act as a deterrent remains a long-pending debate.

\n

- The demand for the death penalty in a rape case puts forth the idea of ultimately equating rape with death.

\n

- Progressive groups and individuals condemn sexual violence but opposes death penalty.

\n

- They argue that patriarchal notions of 'honour' lead society to believe that rape is the worst thing that can happen to a woman.

\n

- Rape is a tool of patriarchy, an act of violence, and has nothing to do with morality, character or behaviour of the woman.

\n

- There is a thus a need to strongly challenge this stereotype of the 'destroyed' woman who loses her honour and who has no place in society after she's been sexually assaulted.

\n

- In this line, the Justice Verma Committee ruled against recommending death penalty even in the rarest of the rare rape cases.

\n

- Justice Verma Committee was formed in 2013 to look into crimes against women after the infamous Delhi gang rape case.
\n
- The committee also rejected the suggestion of chemical castration, saying it would violate human rights.
\n
- As, mutilation of the body is not permitted under the constitution.
\n
- It would be unconstitutional and inconsistent with basic human rights treaties to expose any citizen without the consent to potentially dangerous medical side effects.
\n

\n\n

What is the way forward?

\n\n

- The mandatory minimum sentences for sexual offences have already been increased by the POCSO Act and the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 2013.
\n
- So the need of the day is successful prosecutions, an increase in number of convictions and social awareness.
\n
- It is the lack of fear of being caught which drives most criminals and rapists.
\n
- Thus, a robust criminal justice system would act as a more effective deterrent against rape or sexual violence.
