Gender Selectiveness

Why in news?
\n\n
A Kerala newspaper offered 'scientific' advice for conceiving boys.
\n\n
What is the current scenario?
\n\n
\n

- Indian society has long had a preference for sons.

In

- As a result, sex-selective abortion and female foeticide have led to the country having one of the world's most skewed sex ratios.

In

- According to the Census 2011, there were 914 girls to every 1,000 boys in India for children up to the age of six.
\n
- A report pointed to the fact that in the absence of prenatal sex selection, several families resort to repeated pregnancies in their quest for a male child and data has shown that at every family size, there were more boys born than girls.

What is the issue?
$\ln \mid n$
\n
- Fuelling the country's obsession with sons, a newspaper in Kerala called Mangalam, last week offered "scientifically proven" advice on how to conceive a boy.
- Among the advice offered by the newspaper are eating plenty of mutton, never skipping breakfast and always sleeping with the face turned leftwards. \n
- The column contains more ridiculous food habits to be followed to "ensure male baby".
!n
- Several women in the country even pin their hopes for a male offspring on what are known as sex-selection drugs.
In
- Women are consuming these harmful drugs - linked to birth defects and stillbirths - without realising that the sex of a child cannot be altered in the womb.

What are the consequences?

\nไn
In

- The article in the Kerala daily just goes to show that gender selection is widespread despite initiatives taken by the Indian government, NGOs and health workers.
ln
- The message isn't going through and the people still value boys more than girls.
In
- Apart from the obvious gore in this practise, it also reflects a mentality that proves harmful to girl children, when the "escape" the sex selectiveness and enter the world. !n
- Stereotypical gender roles that assign certain duties and ideal behaviour to people impact the way men treat women.
\n
- When children are exposed to an imbalanced power system from almost the day they were born, a sense of invincibility makes boys believe people will excuse their deplorable behaviour.
!n
- Children are not born violent, or aggressive or disrespectful of women. They learn to be so from grown-ups and other sources. ! $n$

How prevalent is the crime among juveniles?
\n\n
\n
- More and more young people are taking to heinous crimes such as rape are magnifications of this mentality.
\n
- Rape was the third most prevalent crime among juveniles in 2015 after theft and trespassing or burglary, says the National Crime Records Bureau.
\n
- In 2015, more than 41,000 juveniles were apprehended across the country, 1,841 on rape-related charges. \n
- 1680 cases of rape were registered under juveniles in India under Section 376. Minors were booked in 88 cases of gang rape.
\n
- Moreover, as one of our columnists noted, notions of honour are central to the discourse on rape.
!n
- The rape of a daughter, sister or wife is a source of dishonour to males within the family structure. This deters the reporting of rape to the police. \n

\n\n

What should be done?

|nไn
In

- In order to change the long-standing preference for sons, there is a need to first change the image of girls in our society.
In
- Violence against women will not decrease unless there is a thrust on having a gender-neutral approach towards policies and programmes.
In
- This is because investing in men is also a way of ensuring women's empowerment, because a gender sensitive father, brother or spouse will positively impact women's lives.
