

India and changing political order in West Asia

What is the issue?

\n\n

\n

- India's West Asia relations are no longer viewed through the Israel-Palestine prism.

\n

- Other concerns like the Iran question are on the centre stage now.

\n

\n\n

What are the recent developments?

\n\n

\n

- Modi's recent visit to Israel is suggested to be not based on the traditional Indian strategic thinking in West Asia which centred on Israel-Palestine issue.

\n

- Since Iran's nuclear deal with Obama's US administration, insecurities among Tehran's rivals has increased.

\n

- The changing security landscape in the West Asia region is now largely pertaining to Iran.

\n

- A new political order in West Asia is emerging, led assertively by Saudi Arabia that regards Iran as the existential threat.

\n

- Essentially, Arab leaders can today live with their allies operating with the Israelis, but not with the Iranians.

\n

- Iranian leadership is fully aware of these shifting dynamics.

\n

\n\n

What lies before India?

\n\n

\n

- India, on its part, looks to the region for its constantly expanding natural gas and crude oil thirst.

\n

- Despite the recent changes, ties between India and Iran will not cease any time soon, but run on an independent track including the ongoing development of Chabahar Port.

\n

- India now needs a concrete regional strategy beyond tactical visits.
