

India's Role for the Koreas

What is the issue?

\n\n

\n

- The South Korean President, Moon Jae-in's visit to Delhi is of significance to India.

\n

- It offers scope for India's role in reconciliation between the North and the South Koreas.

\n

\n\n

What are the recent developments?

\n\n

\n

- Talks between US Secretary of State and his hosts in North Korea ended in accusations.

\n

- This has impacted the American diplomacy on denuclearising the Korean Peninsula.

\n

- America demands for a quick and comprehensive denuclearisation of North Korea.

\n

- However, North Korea's agenda on political and military trust building is a challenge.

\n

- On the other hand, South Korean President is particular of reconciliation between the two Koreas.

\n

- Amidst this, Moon's visit to Delhi offers possibility for strengthening India's role in the Korean Peninsula.

\n

\n\n

How did India become a part of this?

\n\n

- \n
 - War - Independent India played a significant role in the Korean Peninsula.
 - \n
 - This was especially in the immediate aftermath of the Second World War.
 - \n
 - India also maintained diplomatic relations with the North and South during the Cold War.
 - \n
 - Economy - With 1991 economic reforms, South Korea became an important participant in India's economy.
 - \n
 - Russia and China also increased their collaboration with South Korea for economic gains.
 - \n
 - North Korea - Resultantly, the socialist North Korea was increasingly isolated.
 - \n
 - It looked for making up for the loss of its old communist allies.
 - \n
 - It thus started focussing on developing nuclear capability.
 - \n
 - Pakistan - Eventually, the Indian Subcontinent became a part of North Korea's strategy.
 - \n
 - North Korea's atomic quest found convergences with that of Pakistan.
 - \n
 - North Korea and Pakistan thus stepped up their nuclear and missile cooperation.
 - \n
 - Certainly, this strained the India's relationship with North Korea.
 - \n

\n\n

What could India's role now be?

\n\n

- \n
 - India is now in a position to develop a more strategic view of the Korean Peninsula.
 - \n

- For,

\n

\n\n

\n

- i. South Korean President is increasingly seeking reconciliation with the North
- ii. there is much international scepticism about the prospects for this peace

\n

\n\n

\n

- Given this, Indian support for reconciliation would be of great political value to South Korea.
- Importantly, it will align Delhi with the long-term interests of the Korean people.
- For, they had been the victims of troubles in the divided peninsula over the last 7 decades.

\n

\n\n

What are the possible challenges?

\n\n

\n

- The post-Cold War Asian landscape is shifting.
- The relations between major powers - US, Russia, China and Japan - are strained.
- This is a new challenge that Asia had not to deal with in decades.
- Meanwhile, prosperity brought by globalisation to Asia over the recent decades is under stress.
- Measures against free trade and open borders, by the Western leaders are contributing to this.

\n

\n\n

What lies ahead?

\n\n

- \n
- South Korea has announced a “New Southern Policy”.
- \n
- This looks beyond Northeast Asia to focus on Southeast Asia, Australia and India.
- \n
- Likewise, India's Act East policy now has a much wider coverage, the Indo-Pacific.
- \n
- These strategies should be taken forward, to reap the benefits of geopolitical developments.
- \n
- With global trade war unfolding, Delhi and Seoul have an urgent need to liberalise the bilateral trade relations.
- \n
- The two sides also need to focus on expanding bilateral security and defence cooperation.
- \n
- They should work with other countries to promote a stable Asian balance of power system.
