IPBES Report on Sustainable Use of Wild Species

A report released by the Intergovernmental Science-Policy Platform on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services (IPBES) has stated that about 50,000 wild species globally can meet the needs of billions of people.

- The IPBES Assessment Report on Sustainable Use of Wild Species offers insights, analysis and tools to establish more sustainable use of wild species of plants, animals, fungi and algae around the world.
- This report is the first of its kind and has been conceived after a period of 4 years.
- One out of five people source their food from wild plants, algae and fungi.
- 2.4 billion depend on firewood for cooking and 90% of the 120 million population pursuing fisheries rely on small-scale fishing.
- The report noted that indigenous people and local communities used local knowledge, practices and spirituality for the sustainable use of wild species. They respected nature and only took what they needed.
- This ensured that healthy populations of wild species were maintained.
- The assessment shortlisted five categories of practices used for wild species
 1. Fishing,
 2. Gathering,
 3. Logging,
 4. Terrestrial animal harvesting which includes hunting and
 5. Non-extractive practices such as observing.
- The report examined specific uses for each category regarding food, materials, medical benefits, energy, recreational and ceremonial purposes and decorations over the past two decades.
- It indicated the increasing use of wild species but added that its sustained use has been varied.

Recent global estimates confirm that about 34% of marine wild fish stocks are overfished and 66% are fished within biologically sustainable levels.

- Countries with robust fisheries management had seen stocks increasing in abundance.
- For instance, the Atlantic bluefin tuna population has been rebuilt and is now fished within sustainable levels.

Many small-scale fisheries are unsustainable or only partially sustainable, especially in Africa for both inland and marine fisheries and in Asia, Latin America and Europe for coastal fisheries.

- The report also presented concerns of effective regulations without which the unsustainable use and trade would increase, leading to population collapse.
- The report further found that the following characteristics would facilitate the sustainable use of wild species in future,
 1. Integration of diverse value systems,
 2. Equitable distribution of costs and benefits,
 3. Changes in cultural norms and social values and
 4. Effective institutions and governance systems.

- It stressed that the sustainable use of wild species needed “constant negotiation and adaptive management” along with a common understanding of “sustainable use”.

SEBI Rules on Insider Trading

The Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) proposed bringing mutual fund (MF) transactions under the purview of insider-trading regulations to prevent abuse of sensitive information by key personnel.

Currently, MF units are excluded from the definition of ‘securities’ under the Prohibition of Insider Trading (PIT) Regulations.

- Insider trading refers to trading of shares by an ‘insider’ based on the Unpublished Price Sensitive Information (UPSI).
- It involves buying or selling shares of a listed company using information that can materially influence the stock price, but has not been made public yet.
- SEBI regulations define an ‘insider’ as someone who is a connected person or has access to UPSI.
- A connected person can be anyone who during the 6 months preceding the insider trade has been associated with the company in some way.
- UPSI includes but is not restricted to information relating to a company’s quarterly results, merger and acquisition deals, major capacity expansion or shutdown plans etc.,
- When insiders use the UPSI they possess to conduct trades, they can be taken to task by the regulator.
- While trading on UPSI is illegal, all insider trading is not barred. If such trades are disclosed to the stock exchanges as per SEBI rules, it isn’t illegal.
- But a company must notify the exchanges within a few days about the trading details of the promoter/member of the promoter group or a director if securities worth Rs.10 lakh plus are traded.
