Antibiotic resistance in vultures

\n\n

\n

- Escherichia coli, a pathogen in over 90% of Egyptian vultures that migrate to northwest India to spend the winter, tend to show significant difference in resistance to antibiotics within a single season reveals a study report.

\n

- The findings of the study are significant because migrating wild birds can spread drug-resistant pathogens and cause disease.

\n

- The vultures that use human-dominated landscapes as part of their life cycle were likely to act as “reservoirs and melting pots of bacterial resistance”

\n

- Guidelines to restrict antibiotic use in both humans and animals by one country or region alone will be inadequate when wild birds can spread drug-resistant bacteria.

\n

- Global collaboration and coordination is the need of the hour to restrict the usage of antibiotics in both humans and animals to tackle these resistances in vultures.

Annual Survey of India's City-Systems (ASICS) 2017

\n\n

\n

- The survey was carried out by the NGO Janaagraha Centre for Citizenship and Democracy.

\n

- It broadly looks at urban planning and design, capacity and resources of Urban Local Bodies, the degree of empowerment of the civic body, and processes for transparency and citizen participation.

- \n
- The survey uses 150 parameters to judge 23 cities, which has placed Pune at the top and Bangalore at the bottom of the rankings.
- \n
- Under the Atal Mission for Rejuvenation and Urban Transformation or Smart City program, Surat, Ahmedabad and Pune shored up revenues and implemented better auditing.
- \n
- The reasons behind Bengaluru's low rank are lack of citizen's charter, low per-capita expenditure and absence of sanitation plans.

A report on Impact of Climate Change

\n\n

- \n
- A recent report in Climate Change journal cautions that up to half the species in 33 biodiverse areas, including Amazon and Madagascar are at risk of localized extinction within decades due to global warming.
- \n

- The 33 biodiverse areas host some of the world's richest and most unusual terrestrial species, including iconic, endangered, or endemic plants and animals.
\n
- Spatially, the regions include southern Chile, the eastern Himalayas, South Africa's Fynbos ecoregion, Borneo, Sumatra, the Namibian desert, West Africa, southwest Australia, coastal east Africa, and southern Africa's Miombo Woodlands.
\n
- It also states that limiting warming to 2 C would enable many species to continue inhabiting the areas they currently occupy.
\n
- Extinction is not simply about the disappearance of species but about profound changes to ecosystems that provide vital services to hundreds of millions of people.
