Prospects of fiscal stimulus measures

What is the issue?

\n\n

\n

- The government recently announced plans for investment in roads and recapitalisation of public sector banks. (Click to know more on Bharatmala Pariyojana and bank recapitalisation)

\n

- How much can these contribute to revive the economy from its present status of slowed growth rate is highly uncertain.

\n

\n\n

What are the challenges?

\n\n

\n

- Infrastructure - Resource mobilization on the scale required for road projects may not turn out to be feasible.

\n

- Given the long gestation period for many infrastructure projects, the benefits to the economy might not kick in for some time.

\n

- Credit - It is not ensured that there would necessarily be an increase in the supply of credit through bank recapitalisation.

\n

- For one, the details of recapitalisation bonds will be announced in the next quarter and recapitalisation will happen in 2018-19, delaying any immediate revival.

\n

- Secondly, the space for lending depends on the allocation of capital among PSBs.

\n

- The finance minister says discretion will be used in allocation, but it will be discrimination based on the past record and future performance of PSBs.

\n

- Demand - The demand for credit in the economy is sluggish because investment levels are low, investor confidence is weak, and interest rates are high.

\n

- Thus, even if there is an increase in the supply of credit, recapitalisation cannot ensure demand for credit.

\n

- This is reflected in the excess statutory liquidity ratio funds with PSBs.

\n

\n\n

What is desired?

\n\n

\n

- The infusion of equity capital into PSBs could help these banks to provision for their NPAs and clean up their balance sheets.

\n

- However, a sustainable solution depends on reforming the lending practices and ensuring that the practice of bad loans didn't continue.

\n

- Governance problems in PSBs, compounded through flawed appointments of independent directors as a form of patronage for supporters or cronies, must be addressed.
