Replacing UGC with HECI

Why in news?

\n\n

Union government has proposed to replace the University Grants Commission (UGC) with a Higher Education Commission of India.

\n\n

What is government's plan on HECI?

\n\n

- \n
 - HECI will be the new, apex regulator for university and higher education in India.
- \n
 - It has to set benchmarks for academic performance, ensure that institutions adhere to these and act against those that violate standards.
- \n
 - Draft legislation appears to be part of a stated overarching strategy towards greater autonomy in institutes of higher learning, including the premier Indian Institutes of Technology and Indian Institutes of Management.
- \n
 - The broad thrust of the Higher Education Commission legislation is to separate governance from funding.
- \n
 - The proposed commission will focus on academic issues, such as course curricula, faculty standards and outcomes, leaving “monetary matters” to the ministry of human resource development.
- \n

\n\n

What is the reason behind government's moves?

\n\n

- \n
- UGC found to be an inadequate regulatory structure for higher education that has resulted in a visible deterioration in standards.
- \n
- The fund-granting process of the UGC and the technical education regulator All India Council for Technical Education (AICTE) has been plagued with allegations of corruption and inefficiency.
- \n
- Union government senses that Creation HECI offers a tremendous opportunity for the government to take a giant leap towards fixing a broken system at a time when the quality of human capital is increasingly determining the success of nations.
- \n

\n\n

What are the concerns with government's plan?

\n\n

- \n
- Setting minimum standards such as faculty qualifications and infrastructure will be only one part of the commission's mandate.
- \n
- The risk of political interference is the biggest challenge as the financial dispensation will, under the new scheme, be directly under government control.
- \n
- In regard with IIT and IIM, both sets of institutions have been granted a greater degree of autonomy in terms of board appointments, fee structures and admissions.
- \n
- But such autonomy went only so far; in January, the government proposed a new law establishing a Council of Institutes headed by the HRD minister.
