① Homophobic Attitude of Society goes against the Constitutional tenet of fraternity.

Homophobic refers to a feeling of prejudice against homosexual couples, in extreme terms bullying (or) violence against Homosexuals.

The term Homophobic was coined by George Weinberg in 1972.

In a recent Kerala high court judgement, court ordered that lesbian couples to live together after they were coercively separated by their parent. This judgement was appreciated by the people and many social media spreaded the term Gender Spectrum in favour of judgement. But on the other dimension it triggered a rude homophobic chirpings in the same social media.

Mary quoted that God created Adam & Eve not Adam & Steve. The Indian psychiatric society had explained that homosexual is not a mental disorder, but this did not convince Indian society.

J.P. Kripalani, member of the Constituent Assembly in her speech she said that Fraternity values enunciated in the Constitution are not merely constitutional (or) formal principles they are moral values & moral values should be followed in life.

Even our father of Constitution Dr. B.R. Ambedkar had once said in an interview that Fraternity is a highest safeguard against denial of equality & liberty. He championed the ideals of fraternity to uphold the cause of oppressed classes (Dalits). In present day time this ideals felicitous to gender (Dalits) who face oppression. (Fraternity is another name of humanity.)

Conclusion

By following the moral values of fraternity mentioned in the preamble people should not deprive & LGBTQIA+ community of affection and ^{regard} thanks to their social orientation & thereby

Uphold the Fraternity values.
